Clovis is one of three companies inducted into the Future50 Hall of Fame

Bethesda, MD, February 2, 2010 – Clovis, a premiere staffing and recruiting firm based in Bethesda, Maryland, was honored as one of three companies to be inducted into the SmartCEO Future50 Hall of Fame at the 2010 Future50 Awards Gala on January 28. Clovis' induction into the Hall of Fame is based on the company receiving the Future50 award for five years.

The SmartCEO Future50 Award recognizes the 50 fastest growing companies in the Greater Washington area based on employee and revenue growth. For five consecutive years, Clovis has been a proud recipient of this award and has proven to be a leader in their industry. Even during this past year of economic turmoil, Clovis continued to grow 35% from 2008.

“We are honored to be welcomed into the SmartCEO Hall of Fame. Our accomplishments are a reflection of the hard work and dedication of our team and the continued support of our clients and candidates,” said Rick Levine, Managing Partner. “The only way that we are able to continually grow our business is by delivering the same quality service that our customers have received from day one. We take a consultative approach in the human capital space and provide innovative solutions for our commercial and government services that prove to be a ‘win-win’ solution for everyone.”
